HIS NAME IS TACT BUT HE'S NOT TACKY

Rowlands of White Sox Proud of Monicker and Uses it to Advantage in National Pastime.

(By Associated Press.)
Chicago, Ill., June 30.—Four letters, properly arranged, tell the chief reason why a man who led a bush team last year is politing an American League team on or in the constant vicinity of the top of the column this year. The four letters are T-A-C-T. The man's name is Clarence Rowland.

Somebody has said, and a lot of others picked up the saying, that Rowland's middle name is "Speed." For the edification of those who don't know you can add that Rowland's last name is "Tact."

It would have been short of human for some of the older men on the White Sox register not to have had, however, deeply buried in their systems, a feeling that was antagonistic when they realized, they would have to take orders from "the busher." It is the same in any other line of business. Rowland has deeply realized this. And being not only a student of the game, but a student of human nature, and especially baseball human nature as well, he set out to batter down this feeling.

Ask any man on the Chicago American team today and he'll tell you that Rowland is the goods. They're hawking him, tooth, nail and batting eye. They'll also tell you the reason. It's because Rowland knows which man to slap on the back when he pulled a grand play—and which not to. He studied his men and soon knew which one needed a strong verbal poke in a soft spot to get his fighting glands stirred. Where he applied walloping sarcasm to this one, he plastered on a bit of appeal to another's pride, or stuff that aroused a sense of rivalry in another.

To some of the older and more experienced players who were his heritage as successor of the beloved Jimmy Callahan, Rowland frankly went for advice. It made a hit. Every one was tickled in the place he liked to be tickled.

But an unbeliever might argue, how about George Stallings and his bustling, busy, bustling "Braves"? That's easy. Stallings, the grinder and driver, happened to have the kind of men on his team. That's the reason the Braves copied the Big Five last year. Every man back of them were the kind that needed that kind of leading. They got bumped where it tickled them most efficaciously to get bumped.

STATE GOLF MEET PLANS COMPLETED

Blue Mound Club Has Schedules Completed—Competition Opens on July 25th.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)
Milwaukee, Wis., June 30.—All plans have been completed for the state golf tournament to be held on the links of the Blue Mound Country club, Milwaukee, the week beginning July 26th, except the final formation of the detailed schedule which will be completed in time for an announcement at the end of this week. The tournament committee has been named to consist of Al Schaller, Janesville; Louis Allis, Milwaukee; C. C. Allen, Kenosha; and Guy W. Gregg, Blue Mound. The handicapping committee will consist of Henry F. Tyrrell, Racine; W. B. Bullock, Blue Mound; and V. B. Anderson, Kenosha. The entries will be required to be filed with each player's handicap, through the secretary of his home club, and will close Saturday night before the tournament opening. This is to give the handicapping committee plenty of time in which to make out the necessarily elaborate handicap list for the special events during the week. It is also advised that entrants for the Allis-Peter-Pitts cup do not have to pay an entrance fee, file their names early with the proper authorities, so that their handicaps also may be adjusted.

The announcement of the tournament includes the following announcements:

"The attention of all members is called to the following rule: Players who do not continue in the match play rounds shall be considered to have forfeited any prize won during the tournament, unless they are excused by the tournament committee. The competition will consist of an elimination round of 18 holes on Tuesday for everyone.

"The low scores will continue Wednesday morning. Thirty-two to qualify for championship by addition of their scores made in the elimination round and round of Wednesday. "The other thirty-two players play for president's cup and director's cup. Players having scores between 65th and 80th places inclusive, on Tuesday play for secretary's cup, on fourth night.

"Players defeated in the last round for the championship cup to play down at match play for vice president's cup. All matches in these flights to compete at match play 18 holes, except the semi-finals and finals of the championship flight, which will be 36 holes.

"The tournament committee have made a radical change in the program this year. There were so many defaults in the defeated eight flight last year that those events have been cut out of this year's program, and while not quite so many cups will be given as formerly they will be of better quality.

"Players having association handicaps of 2 and less are not eligible for president's, directors' or secretary's cups. "Players having association handicaps from 3 to 5 inclusive, are not eligible for directors' cup. "Players having association handicaps from 6 to 8 are not eligible for secretary's cup. The Blue Mound Country club course will be opened for practice purposes to all players intending to enter the tournament, viz., on and after July 12th. As Wednesday is a holiday day, it would be appreciated if other days in the week were used as much as possible."

Chief Bender is not the only one of the old stars doing prior work for the Feds. The Chief has been hampered by the batters in the Gilmore circuit as if he were a mere novice. Ramin Johnson is another chap who looked good in the majors who has fallen down in the new league. This youngster bashed across the horizon with the Boston Red Sox a year ago. By beating Walter Johnson a couple of times he achieved a reputation. The Feds tempted him and he hoped to Joe Tucker, but he is having a hard time winning games. Bob Groen, after having a bad season last year, has come back and is one of Fielder Jones' best. Doc Crandall, too, wins games now and then, while Plank has a good season to date.

THESE CUBS OF '05 ALONE SURVIVE IN THE BIG LEAGUES

Frank Schulte (top) and Johnny Evers.

Of the wonderful Chicago Cub machine that was built up ten years ago only two of its members still survive in the major leagues. They are Frank Schulte, still an important factor in the Cub line-up, and Johnny Evers of the Boston Braves.

Sport Snap Shots MORRIS MILLER

The injury to Jack Barry, forcing his retirement from the game for the present, completes the entire list of athletic regulars who have been incapacitated this season. Not a single one has escaped the Philadelphia jinx, which seems to have deserted the National league entry for one season at least, to spend its deadly wrath on the mangled Macks.

It is one of the strange turns of baseball which invariably sees one of the Philadelphia clubs a victim of continued distress throughout the year. Incidentally it is to be noted that Connie Mack refrains from using the alibi to explain his club's position, though he has had ample provocation.

Umpire George Hildebrand has discovered the secret of reducing su-

WILL McLEAN PLAY AGAIN IN MAJORS?

Larry McLean.

Larry McLean, catcher for the New York Giants, is enjoying an enforced vacation, having been suspended until the middle of August by Manager McGraw for the following reasons: Refusing to return to New York on the day designated by the manager; continual use of intoxicating beverages; uttering threats of violence against Manager McGraw and other officials of the club; personal assault on R. F. Kinsella in a St. Louis hotel; conduct unbecoming a gentleman and the ball player.

perfunctory fat, and he is handing it out with absolutely no charge. Once upon a time George was a carefree outfielder in the Coast league, batting around 300 and at peace with the world. At that time he weighed 180 pounds. Three months after he became umpire Hildebrand's rotund figure began to show angles. Today he weighs 140, and still is shrinking. So if your excess tonnage really bothers you get a job as umpire in the American league.

There was a conference of some of the Federal league lights in New York the other day, which was attended by Gilmore, the Wards and Sinclair, backer of the Newark club. It was given out that the conference was for the purpose of making arrangements to invade New York and Boston. But the real fact of the matter is that Gilmore, who is being hard pressed to make both ends meet, wanted to know from what source funds could be obtained to keep the league alive a while longer.

Last spring the Cleveland club was under the impression that it had more than filled LaBrie's place by the acquisition of Bill Rodgers, a much touted second baseman from the Portland, Ore. club. But Rodgers failed to impress, and was ordered back to Portland. He refused to go, however, and the Portland club gave him the privilege of selling himself for $2,500. Rodgers is now with the Boston Red Sox. He is not under contract, but if he shows satisfactory results he may pay the amount wanted for him by Portland. As yet, however, he has not broken into the game.

This fellow Clarence Rowland is upsetting all kinds of dope with that White Sox team of his this year. First off he's a "bush" league manager and has made good right off the reel. Next he is keeping his team in the hunt for the old championship pennant by using right-handed pitchers almost exclusively. Managers used to think they couldn't cut much pennant ice without one or two good southpaws. But Rowland is showing that's just a superstition. Faber, Glotte, Scott and Benz are his best pitching bets and every one is a right-hander. He works them regularly and fills in with Wolfgang, Jasper and Klepper, more right-handers.

A truce seems to have been established between Tyrus Cobb and Dan Johnson, who a short time ago were named to fill the leading roles in a sketch called "Back to Georgia, or Driven Out of Baseball." They met at Swayze Field, in Toledo, the other day.

"How are you, Tyrus?" inquired Johnson, leaning over the rail of his box, which the players were passing. "I am glad to see you."

"How d'ye do?" replied Cobb, walking along after shaking hands.

GOLFERS' PROGRAM IS ANNOUNCED FOR 5TH

Military Bridge Game Will be Played in Afternoon—Dinner Dance at Six Will be a Feature.

The program of activity for Monday, July the fifth, at the Winnebago Golf club, has been announced, and contains several attractive entertainment features. Every member of the club is urged to attend the event Monday, and help celebrate the Fourth. Messdames David W. Holmes and William Ruger, Jr., will be in charge of the various indoor events, while the golf events will be in charge of the games committee.

A military bridge game, in which each table will represent different forts, will be an entertaining feature in the afternoon. Prizes for high and low scores will be awarded. At six o'clock, a dinner dance will be held, with dancing in order during the serving of the dinner. In this way, there will be dancing to accommodate those who do not eat at the first serving. All desirous of attending the dinner must hand in their orders by ten o'clock Monday morning, so as to give the committee ample time to make accommodations. The committee asks that this rule be lived up to, to avoid any arrangement errors.

In the afternoon the links will be the scene of interesting matches, a special sweepstake event being planned by the games committee for that day. Decorations suitable for the occasion will be placed about the green and in and around the club house.

THE SHIPPING BILL.

It developed very clearly during the Pan-American Conference that the administration contemplates making a very vigorous effort to put through in the next congress the shipping bill which was defeated at the last session. An attempt was made to utilize the proceedings of the conference to stimulate interest in this bill and to commit, if possible, to an endorsement of it which might be used in the campaign for its enactment this winter. There was such an obvious division of sentiment, however, that the plan practically failed, and there was much criticism of the attempt to make the Pan-American financial conference a factor in the promotion of a strictly partisan measure. It is even more significant, however, that the trade bodies of the United States have unqualifiedly disapproved of the measure. Questions were submitted to about eight hundred of such bodies throughout the United States, and the answers have now been received and analyzed. Less than ninety of these trade bodies endorsed the proposition involved in the shipping bill which was before the congress at the last session, or approved the general idea of such legislation. The others unqualifiedly disapproved of the bill. Special meetings of several important trade associations have been held recently and in every case opposition to the shipping bill has been almost unanimous. It is difficult to conceive that the administration, in the face of such opposition, will attempt to force this legislation through at the next session. Those who oppose the bill are now strengthened in their opposition by the general endorsement of their attitude by those who are most concerned—the business interests of the United States.

LABOR VS. ADMINISTRATION.

It may be conceded that the present administration from the beginning has sought to conciliate labor throughout the United States by enacting into law the recommendations of its leaders. A great deal of such legislation was passed by the last congress; but, upon analysis, it was found that it did not grant to labor anything which it had not already possessed and, in fact, was more or less of a legislative sop supposed to represent payment for the support of labor at the polls. There has been a growing dissatisfaction among labor, and particularly among union men, with the present democratic administration. Superficially, it might seem that the failure of the administration to grant in full the demands of the labor unions, or to make the laws which were enacted in favor of labor sufficiently strong to be thoroughly effective. As a matter of fact, that is not the reason for the dissatisfaction of labor with the present administration. It goes deeper than the failure to enact laws that labor wanted, it goes rather to the result of laws which were enacted by the democratic administration as a part of its political program. The Underwood tariff bill was a prime factor in bringing about depression in business throughout the country, with a consequent reduction in wages and a heavy increase in the number of unemployed. That men who are out of work, or who have had their wages reduced, are not materially concerned with a limitation of the injunctive power, or a declaration that labor is not a commodity; but, they are vitally concerned with the proposition that a democratic tariff law has destroyed their means of livelihood, has reduced them from prosperity almost to pauperism, and has closed down factories and work shops throughout the country. The dissatisfaction of labor with the present administration is fundamental and not specific and cannot be neutralized by the mere enactment of laws designed to give the unions more power, or greater freedom of activity. The repeal of the Underwood tariff law is the primary desire of labor, something which cannot be expected from a democratic administration.

STREET OILING.

Wet spring weather that extended to the last of June has sadly handicapped the street department in their work of oiling the streets. The work is now progressing as rapidly as possible and patience should be observed by property-owners who believe their streets are the worst in the whole city. Commissioner Goodman will do the best he can under the circumstances but it will be a few weeks before he catches up with the lists already on file, even if the weather continues fine.

THE CORN CROP.

No need to be discouraged about the condition of the corn crop yet. If we have a late fall there will be plenty of time for it to mature and ripen and then we will look back at the present fears and laugh. There is no need to dream of misfortune, for enough comes out of the horn of plenty each year to encourage further planting of crops. The world looks to us for their food supply and it is we who are to give of our stores we must expect to harvest them.

TRIMMING TREES.

In order to get the full effect of the street light it is necessary to trim the boughs of the trees that have been sadly neglected for some time past. No use to place street lights on every corner if the shade from the trees obscures the light. If property-owners do not appreciate the value of the lights they should have it brought to their attention and be compelled to trim the trees in accordance with the requirements.

While it is not yet a year since the European war actually began, still some people consider the news that comes from the battle front just the same as they do the campaign gossip the day before election.

Why not dig a few artesian wells along that west front. Install a genuine fire department and try flooding the enemy out of the trenches? Perhaps this would be too inhuman after the gas route has been tried.

 They say that when a man is drowning he thinks of all the mean things he ever did, and that the same is true in most all great cases of danger. The other day when we saw that we were about to be dashed into a telephone pole by a runaway horse, we thought of several thousand of the mean things that we had been guilty of, but we says, they can't never accuse us of voting the progressive ticket.

A Pome by Col. Ambrose Beebe.
 You can lead a horse to water, but you cannot make him drink; surround a fool with wisdom, but you cannot make him think. You show an ingrate kindness and get injured for your pains. You can dress a fude in fashion, but you cannot give him brains. You can bring the rich to justice, but it takes a lot of time. While the poor man goes to prison, the rich one pays the fine. If you study human nature, you'll find freaks of every strain. Some you see excel in stature; others great with nerve or brain. You'll find lots of faults to criticize—perhaps some traits to praise; but it's just as Nature made us guys. That explains our funny ways.  And then I'd take some Jersey mud, all red,
 Like some one squeezed a bloodroot an' it bled
 Into the earth; an' then from some old shack
 I'd rip a shingle, weathered almost black
 And lots of other things—that is
 If I could paint.

I'd take a piece of river slate that shines
 Like glass, and mix my colors, and draw lines
 Like spider webs, and leaves against the moon,
 And daub with clover tops, and You'd see a picture, bo!—that is

SIDE TALKS

BY RUTH E. CAMERON

There are some folks who are always being invited on little pleasure trips of one sort or another, house parties, auto rides, theatre parties, dances, whatever the occasion, and who are always the last to be invited.

There are other people who are seldom invited to share their friends' pleasures. They seem to be left out.

Quite frequently the second class seems to be continually invited and points bitterly at the first class. Why should they be continually invited and we only included now and then on suffering and of our own volition?

Giving to Those Who Have.
Now sometimes this state of affairs is the result of the selfishness and thoughtlessness of the people who have. They prefer to give to those from whom they may receive again, to those to whom it is easiest to give, to those who also have.

On the occasion of a certain big celebration when almost everyone was eager to reach a rather inaccessible point of interest, I heard a woman say, "No, we didn't take our car at all. The Cradocks wanted us to go in theirs, you know. We took them the last time." Think of the callous selfishness!

But there are other occasions when the people themselves are at least partly to blame for their isolation, namely, when they are of the type who never seem to have a good time.

People Who Don't Have a Good Time.
You take one of these people on an auto ride, you seek to honor her by placing her on the front seat. She seems uneasy and you find that she prefers to sit in back. It is necessary to pass through a rather unpleasant district on your way to the prettiest road you know. She does not fail to say how unfortunate it is that the city should permit such a dump to exist.

At the taking of the remarks with a deprecating laugh that it is unfortunate for the automobilist that we have so much wind, because it is never so pleasant to ride in a wind.

The road is being repaired in one or two places. "They seem to be always fixing these roads," she says.

She is invariably cold or hot, and always obviously so.

Afraid She Will Be Late Home.
If she knows you well enough she has to get home at some set time, and just as you are approaching the loveliest part of the drive, begins to gently fidget lest you will not get her home on time.

Of course none of these people has anything for which you are directly responsible and yet they make you feel vaguely uncomfortable. They seem a reflection upon what you are offering her.

If you take her to a play, she wonders why the chorus is not so pretty as it used to be, she regrets that the leading man is not sufficiently attractive to supply a plausible motive for the star's love, or wishes they would not play such worn-out music between the acts.

Of course she always thanks you afterwards for her good time, but no enthusiasm of manner or phrase can make you believe that she really had a good time. You are sure that you did not, either. Few things are more depressing than the uneasy, critical state of mind in which this type of person always seems to be.

The result is that when you are on duty bound you may take the critical folks, but when you are out for a good time you ask the folks that have good times, to have one with you and to help you have one.

Handy Tool.
File the hook off a common button hock with a ring top and sharpen to a good point.

This makes a good opener for milk bottles and if hung above the sink it will always be handy when the bottles are washed before opening.

This tool was made by a child of nine after watching mother making several unsuccessful attempts at opening bottles with a fork.

THINGS WORTH KNOWING.
When beans are scorched take them off the fire and set pan in cold water for ten minutes. It will take away the scorched taste and will loosen the good beans from the ones sticking to the bottom.

Drain Pipes.—A tablespoon of common soda and a cup of strong vinegar put in the sink will clean out clogged pipes.

Easy Way Washing Woodwork.—Take pail of water, one-half pint vinegar and a soft rag; woodwork will look like new.

CAVING AND PRESERVING.
Strawberry Jam—Take equal quantities of berries and sugar. Do not mash berries. Cook thirty minutes after they begin to boil. Put in tumbler while hot. When cold, cover.

Current Marmalade.—Six oranges cut in dice, five pounds fresh currants, 1½ pounds seeded raisins, five pounds sugar. Boil twenty minutes.

Fresh Strawberries for Winter.
Select firm, ripe berries, wash thoroughly in cool water to remove all sand, let them drain a few minutes, then hull them into a large dish or stone crock and chop them with a silver knife until the juice comes to the top of the berries. Have glass fruit jars sterilized, and fill the quart size within two inches of the top with chopped berries (the other sizes of jars accordingly.) Have ready a sauce pan of boiling, thick sugar syrup, fill the cans and screw down tight. Set the cans in the wash-boiler or some other deep vessel and fill it up with boiling water, so it comes just to the lower edge of the rubber. Set out of the way and cover tightly and leave until next morning.

THE TABLE.
Mustard Dressing For Roasts—Heat vinegar to which has been added a finely chopped or grated onion, to the boiling point, then mix with dry mustard in the usual manner, adding a teaspoon of granulated sugar. This preparation will keep for several days, but if you wish to make a quantity to keep, as any prepared mustard, strain vinegar through a strainer or piece of cheesecloth, taking out the onion. The mixture will still have the onion flavor and will keep indefinitely, since the onions themselves are the only part of the combination which will spoil.

Orange Sponge Cake.—Two cups pulverized sugar, yolks of five eggs, whites of four eggs, rind of one-half orange grated (add water to make one-half cup), two cups sifted flour, two teaspoons baking powder, one cup one-fourth cup water, whites two eggs, rind one-half orange grated, juice one-half orange.

Mrs. Elson, who answered the summons of the maid who answered the summons.

"I'll see," replied the maid. "Take this card, please." Olive took the card and slipped it into her hand.

The girl was evidently not accustomed to such formalities and glanced at the pasteboard on which was inscribed "J. E. Joplin."

"S. H. Joplin," she called, and then back again at the card before she turned and left.

Olive, standing on the steps in front of the modest rooming house.

"I'll see," she said, and then back again at the card before she turned and left.

Olive sat down in the dull, stuffy room. The air registered the menus of past dinners. She had not long to wait, however. Soon the knob turned softly and Mrs. Elson stood before her in a handsome house gown.

She did not look at her at the restaurant. Perhaps the gown she wore gave the effect of youthfulness.

Olive rose and took a few steps toward her for the woman did not speak and was regarding her in stony silence.

"I sent Mr. Joplin's card in to you," she said.

"How dare you talk that way to me!" She stepped forward and looked fiercely into Olive's face.

"I wish to talk plainly enough to make you understand the facts. If that is possible, and so end trouble for both of us," and Olive walked past her out of the room.

AMSTERDAM STARTS BREAD CARD SYSTEM

Big Holland City Tomorrow Will inaugurate Means of Curbing Consumption of Food.
[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Amsterdam, June 30.—"Government bread" and "bread cards" on July 1, this year, become an institution in Holland for the period of the war, from which the people of the Netherlands suffer much while only looking on.

The Dutch, however, are not compelled to eat Government bread nor to take bread cards, nor restrain their appetites by order. The system here is based on the philanthropic principle and its introduction does not imply any fear of a shortage of flour or bread.

The idea of issuing bread cards arose owing to the ever-increasing number of people in Holland whose resources have been reduced since war broke out in Europe. The drafting into the army of thousands of the bread-winners in preparation to defend Holland against any attack on her neutrality and the decreased opportunities for those who remained at home of finding employment as a sequel to the lack of raw materials in various trades, have rendered the poor as a rule poorer, while those persons wealthier, since they have been able to take advantage of opportunities of making profit by laying out their cash.

Immediately after the beginning of hostilities, the Dutch Government requisitioned all grain and since then all imported grain has been consigned to it. Many bakers took advantage of this fact and the price of bread in Holland has risen enormously since August. This increase naturally has hit the laboring class more than any other class of society, as manual workers always consume a larger proportion of bread than do more well-to-do people.

In order to allay some of the discontent of the poor brought about by the increased cost of their prime necessity, the government recently requested the municipalities all over the country to ask the bakers in their various districts to indicate whether they were willing to make and sell whole-wheat bread at approximately 2½ American cents a pound instead of nearly 6 cents, the usual store price at this moment. Large numbers of bakers agreed to do so under the impulse of a proposal by the government to supply them with whole-wheat flour, wheat through the municipalities at a price averaging 9 florins ($3.60) per 100 kilograms or about 220 American pounds. The price varies considerably in different places according to the cost of labor and fuel. In Vlaardingen, for instance, it is only 7 florins ($2.80), while in Roermond it is 18 florins 50 cents ($6.40). The condition attached is that the bakers furnish pure whole-wheat bread, of which may be added only yeast, salt and water. From every 100 kilograms of whole-wheat the bakers may make 140 kilograms of bread, which they sell for 16.80 ($6.72).

The bread is sold at the low price of 2½ American cents a pound to families which apply to the local authorities for bread cards. No restrictions are placed on the amount of money carried by a family which desires a bread card, but only one pound of bread is furnished daily for each person over two years old belonging to the family.

The extent of the poverty in the towns may be judged from the fact that many thousands of families have applied for bread cards. In Amsterdam, for example, nearly 50,000 family bread cards have been issued; in Rotterdam, 30,000; in The Hague, 20,000 and in Leyden, 15,000.

Before the war, the normal price of white bread in Holland was 18 Dutch cents (about 7 American cents) per kilogram or little over two American pounds; now it is 28 Dutch cents, or over 11 American cents.

SIXTEEN NOW, CAN DANCE IN GOTHAM

Miss Marylyn Miller.
It was only a year ago that New York got its first glimpse of little Miss Miller, who then made her debut as a great toe-dancer on the Gay White Way. Her career as a performer has been a rugged one, due to the child labor law in New York which prohibited her from appearing before she was sixteen years of age. Miss Miller has been dancing ever since she was four, but until last year she had to be content to play in cities other than New York.

London, June 30.—No place is more dangerous for an untended child than a public park, said Miss Damer Dawson, one of the first police women to be enrolled in England speaking before the Women's Suffrage Constitutional Society of London. Men of criminal tendencies haunt the parks, and have been known to steal children and keep them in the cellars of old demolished buildings in outlying districts. In patrolling parks and outlying districts women police perform their most useful service. Women in uniform have also kept unruly girls under control in the neighborhood of the military camps. At the present time, both Southampton and Hull are officially employing women police.

Margery's Answer.

"Well, it has come at last," said Margery next morning, passing a newly opened letter of the morning delivery over to Griswold. "The railroad people are taking their work away from us. I've been looking for that in every mail."

Griswold glanced at the letter and handed it back. The burden was lying heavily upon him, and his only comment was a questioning, "Well?"

At this, Margery set her face again. "What's the use?" he said dejectedly. "We're down, and everything we do merely prolongs the agony. Do you know that they tried to burn the plant last night?"

"No; I hadn't heard."

"They did. They had everything fixed; a pile of kindlings laid in the corner back of the machine shop annex and the whole thing saturated with kerosene."

"Well, why didn't they do it?" queried Griswold, half-heartedly. After the heavens have fallen, no mere terrestrial cataclysm can evoke a thrill.

"That's a mystery. Something happened; just what, the watchman who had the machine shop beat couldn't tell. He says there was a flash of light bright enough to blind him, and then a scrap of some kind. When he got out of the shop and around to the place, there was no one there; nothing but the pile of kindlings."

Griswold took up the letter from the railway people and read it again. When he faced it down on Raymer's desk, he had closed with the conclusion which had been thrusting itself upon him since the early morning hour when he had picked his way among the sidewalk pools to the plant from upper Shawnee street.

"You can still save yourself, Edward," he said, still with the colorless note in his voice. And he added: "You know the way."

Raymer jerked his head out of his desk and swung around in the pivot-chair.

"See here, Griswold; the less said about that at this stage of the game, the better it will be for both of us!" he exploded. "I'm going to do as I said I should, but not until this fight is settled, one way or the other!"

Griswold did not retort in kind.

"The condition has already expired by limitation; the fight is as good as settled now," he said, placably. "We've only making a hopeless bluff. We can hold our forty or fifty tramp workmen just as long as we pay their board over in town, and don't ask them to report for work. But the day the shop whistle is blown, four out of every five will vanish. We both know that."

"Then there is nothing for it but a receivership," was Raymer's gloomy decision.

"Not without a miracle," Griswold admitted. "And the day of miracles is past."

Thus the idealist, out of a depth of wretchedness and self-exprobiation, Alberto unflinching. But if he could have had even a momentary gift of telepathic vision he might have seen a miracle at that moment in the preliminary stage of its working.

The time was half-past nine; the place a grotto-like summer house on the Mercedes lawn. The miracle workers were two: Margery Grierson, radiant in the daintiest of morning house-gowns, and the man who had taken her retainer, Miss Grierson was curiously examining a photographic print; the pictured scene was a well-lighted laundry yard with buildings forming an angle in the near background. Against the buildings a pile of shavings with kindlings showed quite clearly; and, stooping to ignite the pile, was a man who had evidently looked up at, or just before, the instant of camera-snapping. There was no mistaking the identity of the man. He had a round, pig-jowl face; his bristling mustaches stood out stiffly as if in sudden horror; and his hat was on the back of his head.

"It ain't very good," Broffin apologized. "The sun ain't high enough yet to make a clear print. But you said 'bury,' and I reckon it will do."

Miss Grierson nodded. "You caught him in the very act, didn't you?" she said coolly. "What did he hope to accomplish by setting fire to the works?"

"It was a frameup to capture public sympathy. There's been a report circulating 'round that Raymer and Griswold was going to put some of the ring-leaders in jail, if they had to make a case against 'em. Clancy had it figured out that the fire'd be charged up to the owners, themselves."

Miss Grierson was still examining the picture. "You made two of these prints?" she asked.

"Yes; here's the other one—and the film."

"And you have the papers to make them effective?"

Broffin handed her a large envelope, unsealed. "You'll find 'em in there. That part of it was a bluff. Your governor ought to fire that man Murray. He was payin' Clancy in checks!"

Again Miss Grierson nodded. "About the other matter?" she inquired. "Have you heard from your messenger?"

Broffin produced another envelope. It had been through the mails and bore the Duluth postmark.

"Affidavits was the best we could do there," he said. "My man worked it to go with MacFarland as the driver of the rig. They saw some mighty fine timber, but it happened to be on the wrong side of the St. Louis county line. He's a tolerably careful man, and he verified the landmarks."

"Affidavits will do," was the event-tuned rejoinder. Then: "These papers are all in duplicate?"

"Everything in pairs—just as you ordered."

Miss Grierson took an embroidered chamois-skin money book from her bosom and began to open it. Broffin raised his hand.

"Not any more," he objected. "You overpaid me that first evening in front of the Winnebago."

"You needn't hesitate," she urged. "It's my own money."

"I've had plenty."

"Then I can only thank you," she said, rising.

He knew that he was being dismissed, but the one chance in a thousand had yet to be tested.

"Just a minute, Miss Grierson," he begged. "I've done you right in this business, haven't I?"

"You have."

"I said I didn't want any more money, and don't. But there's one other thing. Do you know what I'm here in this little jay town of yours for?"

"Yes; I have known it for a long time."

"I thought so. You knew it that day out at the De Soto, when you was tellin' Mr. Raymer a little story that was partly true and partly made up—what?"

"Every word of the story about Mr. Griswold—the story that you overheard, you know—was true; every single word of it. Do you suppose I should have dared to embroider it the least little bit—with you sitting right there at my back?"

Broffin got up and took a half-burned cigar from the ledge of the summer house where he had carefully laid it at the beginning of the interview.

"You've got me down," he confessed, with a good-natured grin. "The man that plays a winner hand against you has got to get up before sun in the morning and hold all trumps, Miss Grierson—to say nothin' of being a mighty good bluffer, on the side." Then he switched suddenly. "How's Mr. Galbraith this morning?"

"He is very low, but he is conscious again. He has asked us to wire for the cashier of his bank to come up."

Broffin's eyes narrowed. "The cashier is sick and can't come," he said.

"Well, someone in authority will come, I suppose."

Once more Broffin was thinking in terms of speed. Johnson, the paying teller, was next in rank to the cashier. If he should be the one to come to Wahaska.

"If you haven't anything else for me to do, I reckon I'll be going," he said, hastily, and forthwith made his escape. The telegraph office was a good ten minutes' walk from the lake front, and in the light of what Miss Grierson had just told him, the minutes were precious.

Something less than a half-hour after Broffin's hurried departure, Miss Grierson drove by quieter thoroughfares into the street upon which the Raymer property fronted. Smoke was pouring from the tall central stack of the plant, and it had evidently provoked a sudden and wrathful gathering of the clans. The sidewalks were filled with angry workmen, and an excited argument was going forward at one of the barred gates between the locked-out men and a watchman inside of the yard.

The crowd let the trap pass without hindrance. Though it was the first time she had been in the new office, she seemed to know where to find what she sought; and when Raymer took his face out of his desk, she was standing on the threshold of the open door and smiling across at him.

"May I come in?" she asked; and when he fairly bubbled over in the effort to make her understand how welcome she was: "No; I mustn't sit down, because if I do, I shall stay too long—and this is a business call. Where is Mr. Griswold?"

"He went up town a little while ago, and I wish to goodness he'd come back."

"You have been having a great deal of trouble, haven't you?" she said, sympathetically. "I'm sorry, and I've come to help you cure it."

Raymer shook his head despondently.

"I'm afraid it has gone past the curing point," he said.

"Oh, no, it hasn't. I have discovered the remedy and I've brought it with me." She took a sealed envelope from the inside pocket of her driving coat and laid it on the desk before him.

"I'm going to ask you to look that up in your office safe for a little while. Just as it is," she went on. "If there are no signs of improvement in the sick situation by three o'clock, you are to open it—you and Mr. Griswold—and read the contents. Then you will know exactly what to do, and how to go about it."

Her lips were trembling when she got through, and he saw it. She was going then, but he got before her and shut the door and put his back against it.

"I don't know what you have done, but I can guess," he said, lost now to everything save the intoxicating joy of the barrier-breakers. "You have a heart of gold, Margery, and I—"

"Please don't," she said, trying to stop him; but he would not listen.

"No; before that envelope is opened, before I can possibly know what it contains, I'm going to ask you one question in spite of your prohibition; and I'm going to ask it now because, afterward, I may not—you may not—that is; perhaps it won't be possible for me to ask, or for you to listen. I love you, Margery; I—"

She was looking up at him with the faintest shadow of a smile lurking in the depths of the alluring eyes. And her lips were no longer tremulous when she said: "Oh, no, you don't. If I were as mean as some people think I am, I might take advantage of all this, mightn't I? But I shan't. Won't you open the door and let me go? It is very important."

"Heavens, Margery! Don't make a joke of it!" he burst out. "Can't you see that I mean it? Girl, girl, I want you—I need you!"

This time she laughed outright. Then she grew suddenly grave.

"My dear friend, you don't know what you are saying. The gate that you are trying to break down opens upon nothing but misery and wretchedness. If I loved you as a woman ought to love her lover, for your sake and for my own I should still say no—a thousand times no! Now will you open the door and let me go?"

He opened the door and she slipped past him. But in the corridor she turned and laughed at him again.

"I am going to cure you—you, personally, as well as the sick situation—Mr. Raymer," she said flippantly. Then, mimicking him as a spoiled child might have done: "I might possibly learn to think of you—in that way—after a while. But I could never, never, never learn to love your mother, and your sister!"

And with that spiteful thrust she left him.

CHAPTER XXVI.

The Gray Wolf.

As it chanced, Jasper Grierson was in the act of concluding a long and apparently satisfactory telephone conversation with his agent in Duluth at the moment when the door of his private room opened and his daughter entered.

He hung the receiver on its hook and was pushing the bracketed telephone set aside when Margery crossed the room swiftly and placed an envelope, the counterpart of the one left with Raymer, on the desk.

"There is your notice to quit," she said calmly. "You threw me down and gave me the double-cross the other day, and now I've come back at you."

Another man might have hastened to meet the crisis. But the gray wolf was of a different mettle. He let the envelope lie untouched until after he had pulled out a drawer in the desk, found his box of cigars, and had leisurely selected and lighted one of the fat black monstrosities. When he tore the envelope across, the photographic print fell out, and he studied it carefully for many seconds before he read the accompanying documents. For a little time after he had tossed the papers aside there was a silence that bit. Then he said, slowly:

"So that's your ruse, is it? Where does the game stand, right now?"

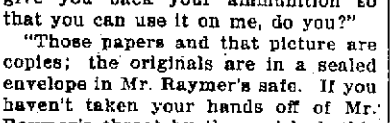

"You stand to lose."

Again the biting silence; and then: "You don't think I'm fool enough to give you back your ammunition so that you can use it on me, do you?"

"Those papers and that picture are copies; the originals are in a sealed envelope in Mr. Raymer's safe. If you haven't taken your hands off of Mr. Raymer's throat by three o'clock this afternoon, the envelope will be opened."

Jasper Grierson's teeth met in the marrow of the fat cigar. Equally without heat and without restraint, he stripped her of all that was womanly, pouring out upon her a flood of foul epithets and vile names garnished with bitter, brutal oaths. She shrank from the crude and savage upbraidings as if the words had been hot irons to touch the bare flesh, but at the end of it she was still facing him hardily.

AN EASY WAY TO GET FAT AND BE STRONG

The trouble with most thin folks who wish to gain weight is that they insist on drugging their stomach or stuffing it with greasy foods; rubbing on useless "flesh creams," or following some foolish physical culture stunt, while the real cause of thinness goes untouched. You cannot get fat until your digestive tract assimilates the food you eat.

Thanks to a remarkable new scientific discovery, it is now possible to combine into simple form the very elements needed by the digestive organs to help them convert food into rich, fat-laden blood. This master-stroke of modern chemistry is called Sargol and has been termed the greatest of flesh-builders. Sargol aims through its regenerative, reconstructive powers to coax the stomach and intestines to literally soak up the fattening elements of your food, and pass them into the blood, where they are carried to every starved, broken-down cell and tissue of your body. You can readily picture the result when this amazing transformation has taken place and you notice how your cheeks fill out, hollows about your neck, shoulders and bust disappear and you take on from 10 to 20 pounds of solid, healthy flesh. Sargol is absolutely harmless, inexpensive, efficient. Your druggist has it and will refund your money if you are not satisfied, as per the guarantee found in every package.

Caution:—While Sargol has given excellent results in overcoming nervous dyspepsia and general stomach troubles it should not be taken by those who do not wish to gain ten pounds or more.—Advertisement.

CANNING FACTORY STARTS BIG SEASON WITH LARGE FORCE

Over One Hundred Employees Open
Pea Season, Which Looks Like Banner Year.

Over one hundred men and women opened the pea canning season at the Hohenadel Canning company a week ago last Monday. From all appearances this year will be a banner one for the canners, as there are probably more acres of the vines planted than ever before. Farmers report that the vines have grown fine and that the peas have ripened much earlier this season than they do as a rule. Employees are working day and night, on account of the quick ripening and the chances for the peas to sour, if allowed to stand. It is expected that the season will last for about four or five weeks. The steady influx of vines from the farmers, and it is hoped that all previous records may be surpassed. However, the doors of the factory were closed today to let some of the younger vines have a chance to ripen a little more before being brought in. The peas themselves seem to be of a very rich and sweet quality this season, probably due to the extensive rains during the month of June.

BIG TIME FOR FARMERS OF LEYDEN CO-OPERATIVE CREAMERY CO. ON 4TH

Everyone belonging to the Leyden Co-operative Creamery company, and a lot that do not belong too, will be headed for Gibbs Lake on the morning of the Fourth of July, for that is the place that the fifth annual picnic of this organization will be held this year. Besides the large and generous picnic dinner, and all kinds of refreshments, there will be baseball games, but Indian races, and every description of sport that can be invented. There will be two feature ball games, the first between Magnuson and Hardaway and the other between the winners of that game and Porter. Then the single men and married men will engage in a tug of war. The feature item on the program, however, will be an address to be given by a speaker engaged from the agricultural department from Madison. Although the management has not yet decided on the speaker, they assure the members that the address will be educational as well as interesting.

PERIODICAL LOCUST IS JUST ABOUT DUE

Seventeen Year Pest Will Make Appearance in This Section of Country This Year.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Washington, June 30.—After a welcome absence of seventeen years, Brod VI of the cicada is visiting old friends in Northern and Central states, between the Hudson and Mississippi rivers and the interior countries of Atlantic coast states, as far south as the upper part of Georgia. Brod VI is the well known 17-year locust. He's been away since 1898 and when he departs this time about the beginning of July, he will not be expected back before 1932. And he won't be missed, for as any farmer can tell you he's a ternal nuisance.

The peculiar habit that gives this insect his name causes it to arouse great interest each time it reappears. Also it arouses fear for the safety of trees; but, as a matter of fact the actual damage done is slight, accomplished by the feeding of locusts, which is deadlier than the male. The female cuts the bark of the tree to make a deposit for her eggs.

A careful canvass of the whole cicada, especially by the bureau of Entomology with the assistance of the State Entomologists in 1898. These reports caused Michigan and Wisconsin to be included in the list of states that has reason to expect the visitor each time he comes from wherever he's been for 17 years.

Ordinary repellent substances, such as kerosene emulsion or carbolic acid solutions, seem to have very little effect in preventing the depositing of eggs, but recent experiences with Broux mixture or lime wash show them to be fairly effective. The cicada avoid trees sprayed with these preparations, especially if there are other trees in the neighborhood.

The most reliable means of protecting nurseries or young orchards is by collecting the insects in bags or umbrellas, and then burning them in the morning or late evening, when they are somewhat torpid. Such collections should be undertaken at the first appearance of the cicada and repeated each day.

If pruning is made necessary by the female insect's ravages, the worst affected branches should be removed. The less injured limbs may be coated with a mixture of kerosene and lime wax or moderately hard soap. These protective coverings should be renewed at least once a year, preferably in the spring, until the wounds are healed over entirely. It may be expedient in the case of a bany wounded recently budded or grafted tree to cut it back nearly to the bud or graft, so that an entirely new top may be made.

In the case of older trees, the main object of treatment is to secure the rapid healing of the wounds and prevent them being used as points for secondary infection by insects. The worst injured trees in such trees should also be cut out, so that all the vigor of the plant may be directed to the remaining wood. The healing process may be accelerated by thorough cultivation and the use of fertilizers on the land about the trees attacked.

Prairie dogs, jack rabbits, ground squirrels, and muskrats are grouped together under the head of "undesirable citizens" and extensive campaigns for their speedy extermination in many parts of the country have been conducted by the Bureau of Biological Survey of the Department of Agriculture.

War was declared on the prairie dogs after they had made themselves obnoxious by interfering with the projects of the United States Reclamation Service in the west. The burrowing rodents have caused extensive washouts in dikes and dills, resulting in heavy damages. In the Strawberry Valley Project of the Reclamation Service near Provo, Utah. The campaign against them has already resulted in their complete extermination over large areas in Colorado, Arizona and Utah. Most of them were killed by poison, and predatory birds and animals exterminated those remaining.

In Oregon and Washington, investigations are being made with a view of dealing with moles which have been interfering seriously with the cultivation of crops.

As a result of campaigns against the ground squirrels in portions of California National Forests, rangers and land owners have been encouraged to co-operate with the bureau and also to carry on independent campaigns. As a consequence, on thousands of acres which once supported squirrels in abundance, it is now difficult to find more than an occasional animal. Similarly, successful poison baits were prepared for the Richardson ground squirrel, which has become extremely destructive in North Dakota.

Other experiments have dealt with the extermination of rodents which hinder reforestation by digging up and devouring seeds or gnawing the bark of saplings. Special experiments were conducted in the national forest near Ocala, Florida, and at the Converse nursery in Southern California.

In response to requests for aid from farmers in southern Idaho and eastern Oregon and Washington, the department has assisted in destroying jack rabbits which have been doing heavy damage. In one small region, by the use of extermination baits, over 50,000 rabbits were destroyed.

Experiments also have been conducted in destroying crawfish, which do great damage in Mississippi and Alabama.

PLENTY OF TEACHERS FOR RURAL SCHOOLS

No Chance for a Shortage This Year
According to Statistics at Superintendent's Office.

There will be no shortage in the supply of rural school teachers for Rock county this fall, according to statistics now available at the county superintendent's office. Mr. Antilep estimates that all but forty schools are already supplied with teachers and that of those that will close contracts later, have two or more applicants. This means that some 130 teachers are already located, many of them being retained in the schools where they served last season.

Superintendent Antilep states that he has never had so many applications from persons outside of the county as he has received in the past several months. The teachers are evidently first class teachers with good records and considerable experience. Some of them have secured positions while the name of others are not known.

A good number of the members of the 1915 graduating class of the training school have been successful in securing positions, as the training school is being closed for the summer preparation. There are now 55 graduates of the training school who are employed in the schools of the county.

HUSTONIA, OHIO'S NOVEL COMMUNITY

Social Center Idea Worked Out to Perfection by Philanthropic Builder of Movement.

South Charleston, O., June 30.—A few miles from this town lies Hustonia, the only built-to-order community center for farmers in the United States. It was built under the direction of Foster Houston, aged 47, and is designed to bring the neighborhood idea to the country, so that rural residents may have healthy amusements during leisure hours, and so that the young tillers of the soil shall not weaken to any desire to flock to the big cities.

Houston himself deserves a paragraph. He began life as a boy bound out to a skunk farm who allowed a bank and several thousand acres of land on the death of two elder brothers, the nine began to widen his knowledge of scientific farming.

Three years ago he began to put his idea of scientific farming into operation. Owning 10,000 acres of good soil in Madison, Clark and Green counties, he divided his land into thirty-two farms, and instituted the tenant system, which is a business partner. Each farm was operated as a separate business, as Houston and Jones, or Houston and Smith, or Houston and Houston, as happens in the case of his son, who operates a 500-acre plot of land; tenant is supreme on his own farm, answerable only to Houston.

Each of the partnership farms is operated on a card-index scientific, business-like system. All disbursements are by check; every animal and curriumb on every farm is listed, and a monthly audit is made of each partnership. Every field at every month of the year is accounted for, with colored maps. Expert accountants keep the books. An expert engineer has charge of the buildings erected, roads constructed and general layout of the farms. Each of the thirty-two farms produce different crops and stock, the latter numbering into the thousands. Two farms specialize in dairying, another in chicken raising, another in horses, etc. The dairies are models, so far as labor saving machinery and modern methods of handling milk are concerned. Orchards are carefully kept, houses and buildings well painted, and everything conducted on a businesslike basis. All of the farms are beautiful to look upon.

Hustonia comprises 230 buildings. The one which Houston takes most pride in is the Hustonia Athletic Club house, a structure 40 by 70 feet. This place has become the veritable center of the social life of the community, in addition to being the home of baseball and other teams, all made up of men and boys who live on the farms.

"We have had better corn, better hogs, better roads," said Houston, "but it is high time that we have better people—more contented, more enlightened, more educated. I regard this movement as one of the most important of the period."

Houston argues that farmers' boys leave the country, not to escape work, but to seek entertainment. He has plans for lectures, motion pictures and other educational and social activities to be held in the club house between the tenants and Houston there is no end of good feeling.

Houston declares that his tenants—business partners—are not leaving his farms to get land of their own. This is because their efforts, backed by the money of the Houston farm company, brings them gains they could not hope to make on their own farms.

ELECTRICITY AID TO GROWTH

Swedish Scientists Interested in Experiments Which Have Been Carried on for Some Years.

Considerable interest has been aroused among Swedish scientists in regard to the remarkable electrical experiments which have been carried on for some years in one of the public schools in Stockholm. The object has been to test the beneficial influence of electricity on the development of the human body.

Hitherto it had been found possible to force the growth of vegetables by means of electrical currents distributed from a powerful dynamo. This idea has been carried out with signal success in several places.

It was accordingly contended that the human organism was equally susceptible to "expedited growth," as it has been called, through practically continuous applications of an electrically charged atmosphere to the body. Two groups of 85 children were selected, as nearly alike as possible in general health, size, and weight. The respective groups received their instruction in two rooms, both equal in size, ventilation, lighting and other general conditions. But the group in one was constantly exposed to the influence of electric currents, while the other group pursued its studies under normal conditions.

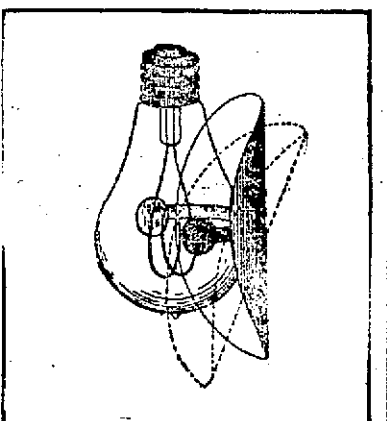

After a test of several years the two groups of children have been compared, and it is claimed that the electrified children have outstripped the others mentally and physically; that they have grown faster, put on weight more quickly, and have shown more physical fitness generally, besides possessing superior mentality.

Skepticism is displayed in some quarters, and the result of the experiment is not altogether regarded as decisive. It is expected, however, that similar experiments will be conducted in some other schools in order to demonstrate the supposed efficacy of the electrifying process in improving the mental and physical condition of the rising population.

ADJUSTABLE SHADE ON LAMP

Device Consists of Metal Disk Bent Into Semi-Cylindrical Form With Clamps on Each Side.

An ingenious shade for use on incandescent lamps is here shown. It consists of a metal disk bent into a semi-cylindrical form and provided at opposite sides with spring clamps adapted to press against the lamp globe, holding the device in position, says the Popular Electricity. As can be seen the shade may be fastened in any position so that the shadow is cast in any desired direction. This arrangement will be found especially useful for hospitals and sick rooms, enabling the nurse to protect the patient's face from the direct rays of light yet leaving other parts of the room illuminated. By painting the interior of the shade with white enamel it may be used to a certain extent as a reflector also.

ASH CAN IS RUN ON WHEELS

Can Be Wheeled to Curb Without Fuss or Fear of Soiled Clothes—Knock for Chore Man.

It was a flash of genius that inspired a Connecticut man to put wheels on an ash can. And when in addition to this he affixed a handle, which also acts as a brake, he puts the chore man almost out of business. For the head of the house can now roll his own ash can out to the curb, if he is not too proud to do so, without any trouble at all and without soiling his clothes. The can is mounted on a pair of small wheels and the handle is hinged to the side. A bolt at the bottom engages the cross bar of the handle and locks the latter in a vertical position when it is not in use as a pusher. Thus the ends of the handle act as a brake and prevent the can from rolling away by itself or from upsetting, as it would otherwise do with only two centered wheels to rest upon.

Ash Can on Wheels.

IRONSIDES OF WORLD POWERS

Battleships a Complex Problem in View of Submarines.

From the days of "wooden walls" to the era of ironclads, never has history seen such a "goulish" of opinion as presented by the helplessness of the bottled up German navy on one side and the destructiveness of their submarines on the other.

Time was when the might of nations was reckoned in dreadnoughts, battleships and armored cruisers, but the old equation seems no longer to serve, inasmuch as Germany, despite her elaborate naval programme was effectively closed to food and munitions by the fleets of the allied nations. Her navy ranked high in the reckoning among nations, yet was rendered helpless by an effective blockade early in the hostilities.

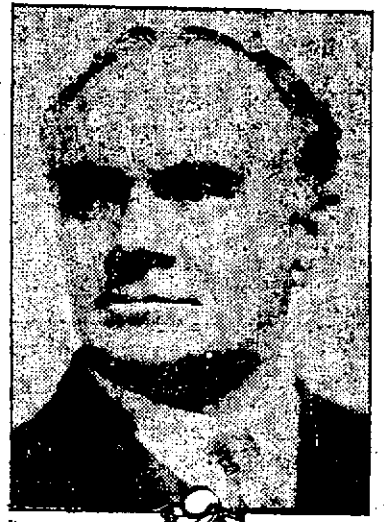

Forced to play the game with pawns, the Teuton caused more havoc with her converted merchantmen "traders" and her tiny "miners" boats than naval science ever dreamed of. Despite her efforts, however, food stopped coming into her ports, and such materials as she needed for the manufacture of powder and shells became unobtainable from nations across the sea. A weaker or less prepared nation should surely have succumbed ere the end of the first six months of the war.

This interesting phase of the great European struggle is fully covered in the authoritative story of the war by Willis J. Abbot, from whom the Galard of this valuable work for its readers, to whom it is offered for only three coupons, one of which is printed on another page of this issue, and the fractional presentation sum of 98 cents.

This beautiful volume, which covers every phase of the war, is handsomely bound in English buckram and profusely illustrated. It contains 364 pages of irrefragable truth about this great war, 463 actual photographs, fresh from the "front" and 20 handsome full-page color plates of the most important details. The value of this splendid volume is $3.00, but through the effort of this newspaper readers can secure it for the small fee to cover the book rights and the handling.

BRINGS JOY TO A HELPLESS CRIPPLE

Mary Fuller.

Mary Fuller, the moving picture star, recently received a letter from a helpless cripple in which he said among other things, "You are my one aspiration to cling to a life of living death." Miss Fuller believes that she is fulfilling her mission in life by bringing joy into the lives of others.

CAPITOL EMPLOYEES
MUST BUY MATCHES

Lights for Pipes and Cigarettes Will No Longer be Furnished by the State.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)
Madison, Wis., June 30.—Employees at the state capitol last year used up some 720,000 matches to light their pipes, cigars and cigarettes and the state footed the bill.

The information comes from Superintendent of Public Property Blumenfeld, who proves incidentally that he is considerable of a statistician, for he figured up that if all these matches were laid end to end, they would reach from Madison to London, Wis.

Also Mr. Blumenfeld let it be known that hereafter employees will be expected to furnish their own lighters. In fact it was Col. Bixley, the governor's secretary, who first found this out. When the new administration moved in, a large match supply was found in one of the vaults in the governor's office. This supply gradually diminished until the other day, the last match was gone.

"Get some more matches," said the colonel to Sam, the governor's messenger.

Nothing doing, colonel," said that worthy. "Mr. Blumenfeld has done stopped buying more matches."

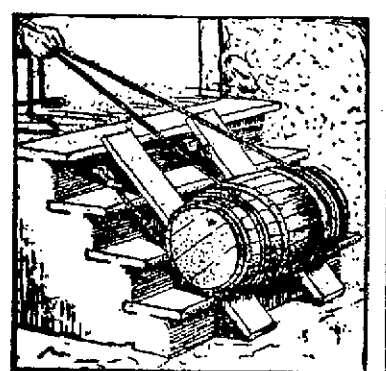

"What's that for?" asked the colonel.

"Well, he says there ain't no gas in this building at all, and there ain't nobody going to start any furnace here for a while anyway," returned Sam. The colonel saw the point.

HOW TO LIFT HEAVY BARREL

Illustration Shows Method That Does Not Require Much Muscle—Two Ropes Are Needed.

The plan shown in the illustration is one well worth remembering. If it is necessary for one man to get a heavy barrel up a pair of steps or onto a platform, it can very easily be done with two ropes. One end of each rope is attached near the top of the incline, then wound about the barrel as shown. It does not take very much muscle to get a heavy barrel up quite a steep incline by this method.

Soldering Aluminum.

Among the latest methods tried for soldering aluminum is one due to a Norwegian who cleanses the aluminum surfaces by immersion in an electrolytic bath and plates copper on them, after which he has no difficulty in soldering the coppered surfaces to each other. Offhand, this sounds like a complicated process, but the ease and speed with which electroplating can be done makes it comparatively simple and it may be one solution of the vexatious problem of joining pieces of aluminum.

Colander and Fruit Press.

A combined colander and fruit press invented by a Minnesota man has a revolving blade which is screwed down into the contents of the utensil as a handle is turned.

ONE OF THE WORLD'S GREATEST IRRIGATION PROJECTS NEAR COMPLETION; 180,000 ACRES OF ARID LAND TO BE RECLAIMED

Elephant Butte dam as it looks today.

Within the next few months agricultural land or as great an area as some of the smaller states will be added to the wealth of the nation through the opening of the Elephant Butte irrigation project in New Mexico in the Valley of the Rio Grande river. When the Elephant Butte dam is completed and the water fills up behind this great wall of masonry a lake five miles long will be formed and 180,000 acres of desert land will be reclaimed.

CENTER

Center, June 29.—"Summer time" has come at last, which is making the corn smile. Owing to the cold wet spring, it will not be knee high by July 4th this year.

Tobacco selling is progressing. What is transplanted is looking fine. Mrs. Will Dixon and Miss Florence Davis were Evansville visitors Monday.

Fred Wright, brother of Mrs. E. L. Davis, spent Saturday night at her home, en route to his home at Milton.

Mrs. Blanche Barlow and Mrs. Nettie Shaw of Beloit returned Wednesday from Cheek, where they spent the past week visiting with relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Harvey of West Magnolia were Sunday visitors at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Rosa. They also entertained the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Davis, for dinner.

Miss Wanda Schroeder of Janesville was an over Sunday visitor with her cousin, Miss Lulu Long.

Mrs. Lucy Goldsmith returned Saturday from Nellisville, where she has been for the past two weeks, on account of the illness of her daughter. She reports her gaining.

Mrs. Mae Fuller went to Janesville Wednesday to spend a few days at the home of her daughter.

Mr. and Mrs. Herman Natz spent last Saturday evening visiting friends in Evansville.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Dixon, Mrs. Charlotte Fisher and son Edwin spent Sunday at the home of Louis Howe, west of Evansville.

Florence Davis returned home last Saturday from a week's visit in Janesville and Milton.

Wm. Sorrow, Jr., left for Nebraska Monday, where he expects to spend the summer.

Henry Pepper and family of Ames, Iowa, have arrived here to spend their summer vacation with relatives and friends.

Miss Dorothy Barlow spent the past week with her sister, Mrs. Emily Ade, in the absence of her mother.

Herman Benash, Sr., is having his full set of buildings painted.

The Fan in Egypt.

The fan was a royal emblem in Egypt and signified authority, hardness and repose. The fan bearers were generally persons of royal birth and were initiated into their office with elaborate ceremony. Frescoes on an ancient palace of Thebes represent fan bearers carrying a semi-circular screen attached to a long handle. The Grecian ladies preferred fans made of peacock feathers, as the peacock was the bird of Juno and symbolized splendor and luxury. As the Romans were chiefly engaged in conquests of a military nature art industries did not flourish as in times of peace.

GREEK PRIEST ARRIVES IN ATHENS WITH MIRACULOUS IKON FOR STRICKEN KING

When the illness of King Constantine of Greece became critical a miraculous ikon, believed to have been painted by St. Luke, was brought from the island of Tinos and placed at the bedside of the royal patient. There were scenes of intense religious fervor in the streets of Athens, thousands of people struggling to kiss or touch the sacred image which was brought by the sea to Piraeus and thence by motor car to the capital. Photo shows the crowd surging around the car when the priest, who is carrying the ikon, alighted.

UNCLE JOE, HALE AND HEARTY AT 79, ADDRESSES HAWAIIANS ON BIRTHDAY

"Uncle Joe" Cannon addressing Hawaiians.

Perennial youth seems to have fastened itself on "Uncle Joe" Cannon. When he celebrated his 79th birthday recently he happened to be in Hawaii, and he delivered a speech to the natives which was as vigorous and as full of fire as the addresses he used to make while on the stump ten and twenty years ago.

MANY CITIES PLAN THE INTRODUCTION OF NEW 4TH IDEAS

Americanization Day Opens New Era of Observance of Anniversary of Independence.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)
New York, June 30.—Advices from almost every quarter of the country indicate that a wide-spread enthusiasm has been aroused among civic leaders over the plan to make the Fourth of July this year an "Americanization Day." Mayors' committees in more than fifty cities, large and small, have been appointed and have agreed to carry out in part at least the ideas of the National Americanization Day committee, whose headquarters are in this city.
The idea as already set forth in posters and in instructive literature distributed in mills and factories, schools and colleges and civic and commercial organizations, is, roughly, to round up a great proportion of the fifteen million foreign-born residents of America on Independence Day and, aside from the time-worn patriotic exercises of the day, to imbue newly naturalized citizens with the full sense of what America means to them.
In its preliminary work, the Americanization Day committee believes it has secured the cooperation of educational authorities and employers, particularly to a new sense of what the foreign-born population means to America. Letters from a great number of prominent citizens have borne expression to the effect that the responsibility of the American towards the alien should be more fully met.
The manner in which the Americanization Day program will be carried out will vary somewhat in the different cities, but a large number of them will follow the suggestion of the general committee as to holding a reception to the foreign-born, whether citizens or not, will be invited to meet their city officials and other prominent citizens. Arrangements are being made in a number of cities for the use of the public schools, the platforms, on which the most recent added citizens will have special seats of honor. A special feature of the occasion will be the recitation in unison of the oath of allegiance to the United States, as the American flag is unfurled. Pageants and patriotic motion pictures will be a part of the program in some cities.
The United States Commission of Education, C. P. Claxton, who has issued an official circular endorsing the movement, says that among the things which the speakers on Americanization Day should emphasize are: "That every foreign-speaking person in America should learn English by attending the public schools, because the English language is the master key to American opportunities and life, and the first step to real citizenship; that every illiterate immigrant should learn to read and write so that he can read American newspapers and attend personally to his business matters; and that adults and children, native and foreign-born be given civic training in both evening and day schools, so that everyone in our country will understand the functions of our government, the principles of democracy and for what America stands."
During the Flag Day exercises on June 14, the schools of the country largely furthered the movement for Americanization Day and the committee believes that the outpouring of the July 4th will be so inspiring that the idea, which is given nationwide consideration this year for the first time, will be carried to still further success with each succeeding year.
In addition to the organized celebrations in the cities, neighborhood meetings of the foreign-born are planned in the smaller communities, at which American employers or neighbors will be hosts.
The organization of the National Americanization Day committee includes more than fifty prominent men and women in every walk of life.

Among them are: Nicholas Murray Butler, Thomas A. Edison, James Cardinal Gibbons, John Grier Hibben, George Von L. Meyer, Jacob H. Schiff, Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, and General Leonard Wood. The chairman is Frank Trumbull, and the treasurer, William Fellows Morgan of New York.

ST. LOUIS DOCTOR TELLS OF CANCER IN CURABLE STATE

Chicago, June 30.—"When is Cancer Curable?" was the subject of a paper by Dr. Scott Parsons of St. Louis, which was read before the Surgical Homogeneity in session here today.
According to Dr. Parsons, the paper was prompted by queries as to why some cases of cancer get well and others die, when the general character of the disease is apparently identical. In part he said:
"As I have thought the subject over it appears to me that there are several factors which make for success or failure in the treatment of this mysterious disease.
"Five essential factors appear to play the all-important role in the cured case of cancer. They are: the type of growth; resistance and susceptibility of the patient; age of the patient; period in which treatment is begun; and method of treatment and technique."
After speaking of the pathology of the different varieties of cancer Dr. Parsons stated that "so far, the superstitious and the ignorant offer the best chances for cure and are amenable to operation, cautery, X-ray and radium."
As to the type of cancer attacking the breast and womb, while giving a higher mortality, early radical operation is the only treatment so far furnishing a successful result. The high mortality is due to delayed operation.
The age of the patient plays an important role. Cancers of all types are to be considered an extremely serious ailment, more so in those of the first and second triennial of life, or from 50 to 60 years of age. Those over 60 offer the best possible chances of recovery.
"Cancer surgery has reached a stage of specialization and to be successful requires, on the part of the operator, besides an exact knowledge of anatomy and pathology, boldness, expert technical knowledge, faultless surgical cleanliness, and acute surgical judgment."

TURKISH STEAMERS TAKE RISKY TRIPS

Little Coasters With Cargoes of Ammunition Run Daily To Lower Ports of Empire.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)
Constantinople, June 30.—Turkish steamers still run up the Sea of Marmora from Constantinople to Gallipoli and Chanak, notwithstanding the activity of the British submarines. Their cargo is mainly war stores and munitions, and anyone who wishes to ship as passengers, whether he be Turk or alien, must have official permission to make the trip.
The fear of submarines is very strong among the Turkish sailors, and the steamers bound for the Gallipoli zone slip away from their docks at odd hours, generally midnight or later, with a squad of sharpshooters, twelve or more in number, stationed about the rail on both sides of the boat, rifles in hand, straining their eyes over the waters in search of the enemy porpoises, and the excited imagination every porpoise seems a submarine. So the firing is frequent.
The crack of the rifles tends to steady the nerves, however, and so that by the time the real danger zone comes to sight the soldiers are quite indifferent to danger, and lounge about the deck with utter contempt for the underwater menace.
A little out of Constantinople the steamers pass the big powder works, which even in the blackness of night present a scene of modern war. Eight towering chimneys belch forth smoke and flame, and the glare of the lighted windows tell of the struggle going on to keep pace with the demand for munitions.
Ten hours from Constantinople finds the ship in the broadest part of the Sea of Marmora, and a few hours later the peninsula of Gallipoli begins to draw near.
This section of the country is far from desolate. Every acre is cultivated. Roads wind in and out along the shore, and windmills crown the crest of the ridges of Gallipoli. Wherever the sea pushes the land to form a bay, there is a little town, busy and prosperous in a Turkish manner of speaking. In every case, the salient feature is a skypiercing minaret. At fixed points along the road, walled military camps squat against the green landscape.
At Gallipoli, a curious feature is provided by large black-and-white signboards erected here and there over many of the buildings of the town. These are to indicate neutral property. How the owners hope that the gun-pointers of the ships in the Gulf of Suez, many miles away behind the hills, can see these signs is not explained.
The fact several important structures here were hit by those skyrocketing English shells impelled Enver Pasha to send twenty-five French and English prisoners from Constantinople to be housed in Gallipoli, where they subsisted for six days at the expense of Hoffman Philip, secretary of the American Embassy, who accompanied them officially.
A feature of Chanak is the collection of emigrants living in the Street of the Lane Camel. They were gathered from various destroyed houses by a kind-hearted Turk, who now feeds them.
Chanak is only the shell of a city. Beyond the white houses that line the seashore, there is nothing, except in the direction of Kilit Bahr, from which it is separated by only a few hundred yards of water. Only wind the visitor actually sees this narrow passage, swept by over fifty eight-inch guns mounted thirty feet above the water, does the difficulty of attempting to force it become clear. Every inch of the surface of the water is plotted on the artillery maps in the forts, and it needs but an instant's calculation to get the exact range of any ships entering the zone.
Two thousand shells per hour fell in Chanak during one of the bombardments by the British fleet, but the casualties in the forts were only 28 killed and 60 wounded. The damage to the forts was not serious. This is proof enough that the problem of attacking land fortifications with ships, even when they are armed with the most powerful guns, still leaves a heavy margin of advantage with the forts.

Admiral von Uexdoorn, the German commander, is a gentleman with a kindly eye and a courteous manner. He wears the badge of the order Pour le Merite and lives comfortably in a concealed camp, where the attentions of hostile aeroplanes have not yet been directed.

SAYS JAPS LAYING FOUNDATION FOR A SECOND WORLD WAR

Judge L. R. Wilkey.

"The strangling of China by Japan under the circumstances and in the manner in which she is doing it, is the most striking exhibition of international recklessness and audacity the modern world has witnessed," says L. R. Wilkey, former judge of the United States court for China and an authority on far eastern problems. "If she carries through her program as planned she will unsettle completely the equilibrium of the far east, and will lay the foundation for a second world war in the not far distant future."

DANIELS OUTLINES NEW ARMY-NAVY PLAN

Secretary of Navy Has Idea Through Which Water Defense Can Be Made Self Supporting.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)
Washington, D. C., June 30.—A "self supporting" navy, making its own battleships, torpedo boats, submarines, torpedoes, projectiles, armor plate, powder and all war supplies, is the ideal of Secretary of the Navy Daniels.
Today he outlined to his hopes of a naval utopia. He believes it is not only possible but probable that, with proper financial assistance and approval from Congress, realization of his plans may be reached before the end of the present administration.
"Of course we never expect to manufacture all of our own materials for the navy; we will probably always buy a certain amount of supplies needed, but it is my hope that the navy will be equipped to make its part all of the supplies it uses," Secretary Daniels stated.

capacity in its own powder plants," he said, "to supply all the ships and keep up reserve supplies—on the present footing of the navy, of course." In case of war, Daniels admits, it would be necessary for the navy to purchase a great part of its powder and projectiles, as well as many ships to become naval auxiliaries. The capacity of the powder plant at Indian Head, Md., on the Potomac river a few miles below Washington, will be doubled within a short time, according to the navy's head. The torpedo projectile plant at Newport, R. I., will also be doubled in output capacity, he stated. Incidentally he is keeping in touch with both plants by personal visits.
In carrying out his plan for a "self supporting" navy in regard to powder and projectiles, the Secretary has more ambitious plans for the government in constructing its own dreadnoughts. He hopes to build one of the new dreadnoughts Congress may authorize next winter at the League Navy yard at Philadelphia. The Brooklyn Navy Yard has already qualified in this respect in the recent construction of the battleship New York. Incidentally, she was completed four and a half months earlier than her sister ship, the Texas, built by private contractors.
The new battleships Arizona and California are also achievements of government employees at the Brooklyn yard. Submarines are also being built in the government's own yards as well as fuel and supply ships.
Construction of ships in navy yards justifies an enlargement of that policy, says Secretary Daniels. "It was discouraged formerly because, by an unwise system of accounting, overhead charges, in nowise properly chargeable against new construction, were added to the actual cost of construction. This made it appear that ships built in navy yards cost more than in private yards and the facts were not in accordance with that appearance. In fact, taken as a whole, the contrary is true."

LIMA

Lima, June 29.—Mrs. Bowers is under a doctor's care.
Mrs. Roe was a recent Janesville visitor.
From present indications we are to have a big crowd and a big time on Saturday. The pole has come and will be raised today, a man from Milwaukee superintending the work.
The flag was bought by a Grant and Wilson club in 1875, and is 16x30 feet in size. The pole erected at that time was made from tamaracks drawn from Lebanon. Only five of the subscribers to the fund raised at that time, viz.: H. B. Cornell, A. H. Markey, J. D. Richmond, Wm. Truman and E. F. Thayer are living. Wm.
